“No evidence has been provided that supports allegations of systemic or widespread election issues”

Wisconsin's Chief Elections official speaks out in defense of election process

In the weeks after the presidential election, ample misinformation has circulated on social media and political websites raising rumors about the integrity of Wisconsin's election results. Now, election officials are speaking out.

“Wisconsin's election was conducted according to law and in the open,” said Meagan Wolfe, Wisconsin's chief election official. “While the results are still unofficial and are currently being triple checked as part of the canvass and certification process, we have not seen any credible information to cast any doubt on those unofficial results.”

“When issues are reported to our office, we take them very seriously,” she continued. “We look into each allegation and request evidence from parties involved. At this time, no evidence has been provided that supports allegations of systemic or widespread election issues.”

“Unfortunately, we are seeing many concerns that result from this unsubstantiated misinformation. We want Wisconsin's voters to know we hear their concerns and to provide facts on these processes to combat the rumors and misinformation,” Wolfe said.

Officials pointed out that every step of the election process is publicly observable and transparent. This includes voting at the polls on Election Day and the counting of absentee ballots. It also includes the canvass and certification of the tally that is happening right now in counties across the state. Every ballot cast in Wisconsin has a paper audit trail. In addition, voting equipment is randomly selected for audit after the presidential election and the paper trail is audited against the electronic vote totals; this process is conducted as part of a public meeting.

If there is a recount this year, these materials will again be analyzed, as they were in 2016.

“Election results in Wisconsin are triple-checked for accuracy before they are certified,” Wolfe said. “Your municipal and county clerks, and the staff of the Wisconsin Elections Commission are looking at everything to ensure the will of the voters is carried out and to affirm that only valid ballots were cast and counted.”

The WEC also released a list of the top facts about Wisconsin elections. This list is in addition to a prior statement which addressed rumors like Wisconsin having more votes than registrations and ballots being added to the unofficial totals on the morning of November 4.

“Many voters are visiting our MyVote Wisconsin website to check their records,” said Wolfe. “As allowed by state law, it can take 45 days after a presidential election for local clerks to record everyone's paper registrations and voter participation into the electronic statewide voter database. If you do not see your participation or registration recorded right away, don't worry, it takes time to get all of the data entered into the system.”

There are 39 municipalities which count their voters' absentee ballots at a central location. Because several municipalities could not finish processing their absentee ballots by the time the polls closed at 8 p.m. on Election Day, there was a delay in reporting those results to county clerks. This was especially true in major cities including Milwaukee, Green Bay and Kenosha, where final unofficial results were reported after 3 a.m. Wednesday. Most results in municipalities here were available much earlier.

"Due to the pandemic and the high number of absentee ballots, it took until early Wednesday for all the unofficial results to come in," said Wolfe. "It does not mean something went wrong – it means election officials did their jobs and made sure every valid ballot was counted."

In Wisconsin, voters must be registered before they can request an absentee ballot. Voters then need to submit a valid request for an absentee to their municipal clerk who sends the ballot and tracks it in the statewide database and using USPS intelligent mail barcodes. When a voted ballot is received by your clerk, it has to be recorded that it was received. On Election Day and night, only ballots issued to registered voters, with a valid request on file, and with completed certificates signed by the voter and their witness, are counted. If any of these elements are missing, the ballot is rejected and is not counted.

Some central count municipalities, including Milwaukee and Green Bay, took extra steps to provide the public and the media with live webcams of the absentee tabulation, and the physical locations were all open to the public and the media. Representatives of both major political parties were present, as well as independent poll watchers.

"Despite this transparency, we have seen unfounded allegations that clerks and poll workers stopped counting, that they mysteriously found absentee ballots in the middle of the night, or that all the votes on absentee ballots were only for one candidate," Wolfe said. "It's just not true."

The Wisconsin Elections Commission anticipated there would be misinformation about late absentee ballot reports in central count municipalities. To proactively provide insight into the process of counting and reporting absentee ballot totals, the WEC put out news releases in advance of the election and also produced a video about how results get reported.

Wolfe said that voters have contacted the WEC because of posts they saw on social media about the use of felt tip pens or "sharpies" on ballots. "Voters do not need to worry, their ballots were counted," Wolfe said. "Voting equipment in Wisconsin is tested at both the local, state, and federal level for all kinds of pens and other marking devices. While we recommend that voters use the pen or marking device provided at their polling place or as instructed in their absentee ballot, the use of a felt-tip pen doesn't invalidate a ballot."

Yet another claim on social media after the election was that legitimate ballots had been specially encoded by one of the political parties so any illegitimate ballots could be rejected.

Wisconsin county clerks are responsible for printing ballots which are distributed to municipal clerks, Wolfe said. "The secrecy of your ballot is safe," Wolfe said. "Clerks do not print any watermarks or codes on them that would identify any voter or political party." Ballot anonymity is a requirement of the law, and what candidate a voter chose is not a part of their record. The state of Wisconsin also does not track party affiliation. Local election officials do not know a voter's party preference when issuing ballots.

Wolfe also said clerks and poll workers followed state law in curing absentee ballot certificates that were missing address information.

Another unfounded claim is that just before the election the WEC illegally told clerks they could add witness addresses to absentee ballot certificate envelopes. In fact, the Wisconsin Elections Commission's guidance permitting municipal clerks to fix missing witness address components based on reliable information has been in effect since October 2016. There was no new guidance or change to this requirement.

Voter and witness signatures can only be added by the voter and the original witness. Signatures can never be added by poll workers unless they were the original witness during in-person absentee.

The motion to approve the guidance was made by Republican members of the Commission in 2016 and it passed unanimously.

The guidance has been in effect for 11 statewide elections, including the 2016 presidential and presidential recount. Guidance to clerks that was posted on October 19, 2020, simply restates this earlier guidance.

The law says that a witness address needs to be present for the certificate to be accepted and the ballot to be counted. It does not specify who affixes the address - for example, voter address is added by the clerk on the certificate envelope. If an absentee certificate does not contain a witness address - i.e. the witness forgot or the clerk cannot add it based on reliable information - then the ballot cannot be counted.

There were no corrections made to ballots as some articles and posts claim. These were witness addresses added to the certificate, in accordance with the 2016 directive. They are also distinguishable (initials, red pen, etc.) and done as part of the publicly observable process.

The WEC said it also followed the law and court orders about the "ERIC Movers" list.

There have been unfounded allegations that the WEC violated the law by not removing approximately 232,000 voters from the registration list because they may have moved.

The Wisconsin Court of Appeals ruled in February 2020 that WEC could not remove voters from the registration list. The court case, Zignego v. Wisconsin Elections Commission, was argued before the Wisconsin Supreme Court in September and no decision has been issued yet. The WEC said it will follow the Supreme Court's decision once it is issued.

The current process requires anyone who may have moved to affirm their address when receiving a ballot. These voters have a watermark next to their name in the poll book and are asked to sign to affirm that they still live there. If any voter has moved, they are directed to register to vote before they can be issued a ballot.
